

To whom It may concern:

Recently, my wife Kim and I moved into our beautiful new home built by RT Abbott construction. Building a house from the ground up was never something we had ever even thought about doing. We had looked for a house for a long time, but found very little inventory available on the west side of LA. One night we went to a dinner at a friend's house (who had just completed building his dream home). We were so impressed with his house, that very soon thereafter we found ourselves looking for a lot and meeting the team that had built our friends house.

When we met with Roy, from moment one he made us feel completely at ease about undertaking this huge endeavor. From the beginning and throughout the process, and all the way to the end and even afterwards, Roy and his entire team have made themselves completely available to us. We worked hand in hand with them throughout the entire build. In truth, it was a pretty fantastic experience being able to design/build and execute our dream home.

These projects are only as good as the people who design and build them. Having top notch/honest and truly decent people makes the entire difference in how these things go. Roy (and his amazing foreman Glen Scott) are the best of the best. Knowledgeable with excellent taste and extremely trustworthy. Building a house from scratch is a big undertaking. Can be very stressful and time consuming. We could not have done it without Roy and Glen...they delivered everything we had hope for in a way that exceeded our highest expectations.

We are very fortunate to have teamed up with Roy...it is with my pleasure that I give him and his entire team the highest of all recommendations.

Best,
